Ahmed and Abasi, twins - both 9 years old, had been waiting all week for the day of their school visit to the Cairo museum where they were going to see real mummies and actual treasures dug up from the tombs of the dead. They had been dreaming about this day for ages. They both took the coach with their classmates and journeyed through the blazing dry heat of Cairo, with their backpacks filled with sandwiches and snacks they chatted about what they were about to see. In the far distance they could see the tips of the great pyramids of Giza, only a few miles away. The coach finally parked in the car park and they exited the bus and waited at the gates of the museum, everyone in pairs, silently, just as their teacher ordered...
