My character description.

With claws as sharp as knives, the dragon stood on the irregular rock ready to return to the town they had just come from.

"The government in the town hates me," cried the beautiful woman, her magnificent gown shimmering in the sun.

"They don't know we were trying to protect them, they will one day!" replied the dragon.

Without warning, the dragon flew high up into the sky, circling the petrified people below. Their irresponsible behaviour was the reason he had been banished to live in the clouds. They lived in fear he would return, possibly using his ferocious breath to wipe out their entire town.

The woman stood still as a statue, holding her glowing staff above her head defiantly wishing she could redo the past.
